Columbine victims remembered at teen religious conference

By AL POST
MCN Staff Writer

Former President Jerry Ford and the mother of Columbine High School slaying victim Rachel Scott helped raise the spiritual insights of 60,000 American teenagers last weekend as the first anniversary of the mass shooting approached.

The Columbine hero's mother, Beth Nimmo, speaking at the Pontiac Silverdome revealed that Rachel "set an example for this generation that Jesus Christ is worth living and dying for."

She added "Rachel was passionate about her faith. After already being shot three times, Rachel was asked if she still believed in God."

She did not waver and declared with her last words "yes, you know I do."

Teenagers responded to Nimmo's message by placing flowers on the stage near her feet. Ron Luce, founder and president of Teen Mania Ministries, thanked her for "being a Godly parent."

Later Ford led the youth attending this year's "Acquire the Fire" conference in stating "The Oath of the Unashamed."

The former President joined by his son, Steve, declared "in America a person from a broken home can become President. I am proof of that!"

He credited many God-fearing leaders in his life, including his step-father, pastor, scout leader, teachers as well as his World War II experitrol."

Scores of top Grammy and Dove music award winners reportedly provided the youth with high energy music prior to and following the reading of the "Oath."

ences for "contributing to my life."

Ford said the night before he was to assume the role of President following Richard Nixon's resignation, "I thanked God for all he had done to prepare me. The fact that God was in my life, gave me the faith to know I could do the job."

Former NFL all pro football player Reggie White pressed the need to stop violence by declaring "we don't need gun control...we need heart con-youth -- including hundreds from the Western Wayne County area -- vows they will pledge their life, character and service to God. It adds that "I make God's word the final authority...directing my motives and actions."

Other portions of the oath include: "I will say what others refuse to say...I will not be ashamed to fall on my knees...to cry out to God...to shed tears for the dying...and to live a life worthy of a leader."

At her retirement party Friday in Westland, Sylvia Korozosky-Wiacek, the city's senior resource director inducted eight seniors into the Friend-ship Center's Senior Hall of Fame – the first time so many people have been inducted at once. "They all deserved it," said Korozosky-Wiacek. "These eight were always close to being inducted before, but for some reason, never made it. Since the next director will probably not know that they all deserved to in the Hall of Fame, I decided to induct them on my last day." All were inducted by Westland Mayor Bob Thomas. Korozosky-Wiacek had created the Hall of Fame to honor outstanding seniors.

Dual water meter plan all wet

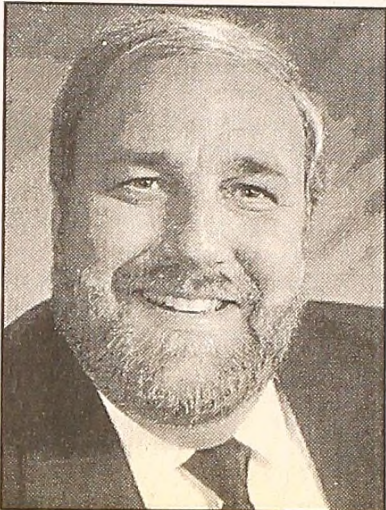

Unlikely that property owners will be able to sprinkle lawns without paying sewer fees

By IVAN HELFMAN
MCN Staff Writer

The steep price of maintaining green summer lawns is causing a crabgrass revolution in Westland's condo country. A revolution that has prompted the city to investigate introducing dual water-and-sewer meters citywide. Under the city's single-meter system, city residents pay $1.84 per 1,000 gallons for water fees and another $2.62 per 1,000 gallons for sewer fees for a total of $4.46 per 1,000 gallons, though the city council will probably lower both rates 20 cents per 1,000 gallons on July 1. This angered the city's condo associations because, owning and maintaining their own storm water drains, they don't use Westland's storm sewers, yet they pay thousands of dollars in sewer fees. This needn't be, said James Godbout, president of Westland Condominium Directors Organization, who proposed that the city allow dual meters for condo associations. He argued that it was possible because Northville Township will allow dual metering for sprinkler systems this year, and because Westland exempts Westland Shopping Center and National Block Co. from sewer fees. But unfortunately for the condo crowd, officials said that the odds are slim that dual meters will be allowed after reviewing a report by Department of Public Services Director Richard Dittmar. Dittmar said that Wayne County, who handles the city's sewage, will only base the city's sewer use on water use. "This formula has been in existence for as long as I can remember and is probably the fairest way to charge the communities on the Rouge Valley system until an accurate way of measuring the sewerage flow from an individual home or business is developed," said Dittmar. He said neighboring communities using Wayne County's sewers, such as Canton, Wayne, Garden City, Dearborn Heights and Livonia, do not have any exemptions for sprinkler systems. Northville can do it because it goes outside the county system. Further, Dittmar said there was a legal problem: "If we grant this request to the condominium owners, that we must afford the same opportunity to residential homeowners, and the business and industrial users." Assistant City Attorney Joanna Bennett agreed. "Other homeowners would probably want the same treatment," she said, adding that, according to City Attorney Angelo Plakas's opinion, all residents and business owners must receive equal treatment unless a legally rational reason for an exemption could be argued. Dittmar also objected to the plan because it would require the city to pay for creating and mailing two bills; to pay for new meters and remote registers; to hire more meter readers; to revise the rates; and prevent fraud from people connection house water to the sprinkler meter.

Mayor Bob Thomas opposed the plan because it would shift the burden of sewer costs, probably causing a rate hike. "There's no way we could do it without someone else paying the bill," he said.

Airport plans for minority shops

Revenue to the airport will more than double and minority, disadvantaged and women-owned business enterprises will make up nearly 49% of the restaurant and retail shop operators if the Wayne County Commission approves airport management's selections for midfield terminal concessions at Detroit Metropolitan Wayne County Airport. These facts were revealed at a recent presentation to the Wayne County Commission's Committee on Roads, Airports and Public Services (CRAPS). The $1.2 billion, mile-long 74-gate terminal is scheduled to open late in 2001. "Eighty of the finest shops and restaurants will reflect the community we live in," said Wayne County Executive Edward H. McNamara. "Revenue from retail earns approximately $10 million for the airport today. The midfield concessions alone are estimated to earn in excess of $22 million. We are proud that these recommendations will present our customers with a distinctly Motor City flavor and atmosphere. The percentage of minority, disadvantaged and women owned participation, we believe, leads all US airports." "These proposals exceeded our most optimistic expectations," said Director of Airports David Katz. "There were aggressive goals for this program, and what I have seen throughout this evaluation and selection process is industry leading. Passengers using the new Metro Airport will have access to over 125,000 sq. feet of new restaurant and retail space - making Metro one of the largest airport concession programs in the world. The appearance of the restaurants and retail shops will be dazzling; and customers service standards are written into the contracts. Passengers will enjoy competitive street pricing and quality products and service, guaranteed by performance standards and secret shopper programs implemented and enforced by airport management." "I feel that the marketplace has given us something very special," said Colleen Pobur, Director of Concessions and Quality Assurance at Metro Airport. "This concessions program will be a model for other airports. It will also serve as a tremendous source of revenue for the airport, nearly tripling our concessions fee - important for a user-funded facility." Prospective concession vendors, recommended by the airport, were on-hand to showcase some of their food and products after the CRAPS meeting, held at Wayne County's Warren Valley Golf Club. The CRAPS committee will take the airport's recommendations to the full Wayne County Commission later this month. The Wayne County Commission has the right to approve or reject the airport's recommendations. Recent improvements at Wayne County's Detroit Metro Airport include:

- A new larger security checkpoint at Concourses A & B
- New restaurants and improved menus at concourse snack bars
- Friendlier, more efficient security
- Triple the arrival curb front access to Northwest flights
- New family restrooms and completely renovated restrooms
- 30 airport customer service agents

Sandra Puzzuoli now has a standing weekly date with her husband, and each week will promise action, adventure, hilarious comedy, and even romance. Is Puzzuoli just very good at keeping the magic alive in her marriage? Maybe...but she definitely won 52 pairs of movie tickets from Canton Cinema in Michigan Community Newspapers' Oscar Contest. Puzzuoli entered the contest by filling out her ballot in the Canton Eagle. The contest ran for four weeks preceding the Oscars, and Puzzuoli and four other contestants guessed all the winners correctly. Contest coordinator and MCN movie editor Syble Marr blushes as she admits that the contestants guessed better than she did. Marr reports that some 300 readers filled out their ballots in hopes of winning the grand prize.

Potts said one of his greatest successes is the U.S. National Chemistry Olympiad — which he ran locally from 1985 until last year.

Potts, who plans to retire this month, earned a bachelor's degree in chemistry and math at Hiram College in Ohio. He also earned a doctoral degree in inorganic chemistry at Northwestern University.

He joined the UM-Dearborn faculty in 1966 and was promoted to full professor in 1973.

Easter baskets prepared

Volunteer workers at the Helping Hand Thrift Store of Romulus have created 32 children's Easter baskets and 35 stuffed Easter bunnies and other holiday critters for distribution to needy families.

The effort headed by Georgeanne Lietzke and Esther Lepper was done so that numerous Romulus area families will have a more exciting holiday.

The store is open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. each Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday thanks to the on-going assistance of four volunteers, during the current convalescence of store director Florence Klein.

Klein, who was named the Romulus Chamber of Commerce's 1996 Person of the Year, recently had surgery and is now recovering at home.

Currently the above two volunteers along with Phyllis Bolus and Jeannie Bodenmiller are taking care of the weekly operations at the store.

Others wishing to join the volunteer team can do so by calling 941- 5323 during store hours.

The store since the 1960's has truly held out a helping hand to families in need in Romulus, Belleville and Taylor.

They offer various family need items at deep discounts (to help pay for the store's rent and utility bills) and donate such items when the need is extreme.

Lietzke reminded area residents that cash donations and items for young mothers — such as diapers, baby formula, clothing for three to six months old babies are most critically needed.

Young women explore careers in math and science

Belleville High School girls recently got a chance to explore science careers at the Explorathon 2000 workshops. The purpose of the workshops was to expand horizons for young women in science and math, and the event was held at Cranbrook High School.

Eighteen students and one parent attended the full-day convention, which encouraged high school girls to enter careers in math and science. Students began the day by listening to a presentation by Dr. Nicky Fox, NASA Solar System Plasma Physicist. Not only did she explain the work she does, but she also took time to explain the hurdles she had to leap in what she termed "a man's field."

After the presentation, students were given the opportunity to attend workshops on such varied topics as Biodiversity in the Great Lakes, Veterinary Medicine, Analytical Chemistry, Inside the Computer, Pediatric Genetic Counseling, Developmental Biology, Heart Repair, Plastics and Recycling, Toxicology, and Laser Exploration.

The 18 students who attended got a chance to meet with students from school districts across Michigan, as well as the opportunity to work with scientists in varied career fields.

Though the conference was geared toward women, it did not exclude men. In fact, three of the 18 students who attended were young men. They found it "fun and exciting." Many students remarked that they had no idea so many different jobs were out there. The response from BHS participants was overwhelmingly positive.

"I found that no matter what area of science or math you go into, there are several different jobs you can get," said 10th grader Jamie Bussler.

The hands-on approach was a positive learning experience for students, according to 9th grader Krista Pancone who said, "I learned about nursing and protective equipment for harmful chemicals. I saw fish DNA and I got to observe a tadpole's heartbeat. I learned a lot today that probably couldn't be learned on a normal school day."

Gearing the presentation toward young women offered students a unique experience, said 10th grader Erin Cullen, "I loved how the Cranbrook trip was female-oriented. Girls have earned the well-deserved right to go into the science fields. It's inspiring to see successful females in the career field I am looking at. I now have more confidence in my career choice."

Explorathon 2000 was just one of several approaches the science department has taken to enhance opportunities for BHS students.

"The Belleville educational community should be tremendously proud of the young women and men who participated in this Science Explorathon," remarked Science Department Chairperson Christine Diehl. "Students who take a full complement of science classes in high school have more job opportunities after graduation, and the fact that these students paid their own way to take part in this activity is a fine tribute to their maturity and to the encouragement of their science teachers."

Board member honored by the Governor

Van Buren Public Schools interim superintendent Larry Tabor announced that Board of Education secretary Ralph Nodwell has been selected as a finalist in the Seventh Annual Governor's Service Awards. The award finalists were recently announced by Governor Engler and the Michigan Community Service Commission.

Nearly 300 individuals, businesses and nonprofit organizations were nominated for the awards, which honor dedicated citizens from across the state who devote numerous hours to serving their communities.

Nodwell is a finalist in the Senior (56 years old and older) category for his efforts to increase fire safety among children and senior citizens. Nodwell is one of only 75 individuals, businesses and organizations selected as finalists after a rigorous peer review by nonprofit, volunteer, business and education organizations.

After reading about a house fire that killed seven children, Nodwell began work on making the purchase of a $20,000 Fire Safety House a reality for the tri-community area. The house fund raising is expected to be completed by this June. It is Nodwell's goal that no child ever again die in a house fire.

The finalists will be honored, and a winner in each of the 15 categories will be announced at the awards dinner on May 18, 2000 in Lansing. The event is sponsored by Ameritech.

Beaten 27 times, Romulus survivor dedicates life to battered women

I don't quite understand why it is that County Executive Edward McNamara chose to forego a nationwide search to find candidates for the top post at Metro Airport. Instead McNamara convinced Lester Robinson, a man with superior credentials but no real experience in running an airport, to take the job.

Robinson better learn quickly. If his appointment is approved by the County Commission, which is likely, Robinson will be faced with a number of critical decisions that could spell success or failure rather quickly.

He will immediately oversee the completion of the billion dollar midfield terminal expected to open in 2001, the creation and completion of Metro's sixth jet runway, and the renovation of the current terminal complex. And if this weren't enough, Robinson must handle the day-to-day complaints from hundreds of airline passengers and a sometimes tenuous relationship with Northwest Airlines which does 80% of the business at the airport.

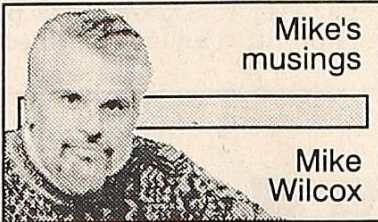

I'm not sure I would wish this job on my worst enemy. Robinson is not McNamara's enemy, but a friend, and I hope for friendship's sake that Wayne County's CFO can merge all the changes taking place at Metro into one of the nation's best airport operations.

The first order of business for the Edison Project, which was awarded the contract to operate Inkster Schools, is to negotiate a contract with the Inkster Federation of Teachers (IFT). In fact negotiations have been ongoing for some time now, and some are reporting an impasse.

The major stumbling block appears to be Edison's merit pay proposal. Rather than awarding pay raises based on seniority, Edison, like many private firms, insists on basing pay on performance. Of course the IFT cannot argue against this, but they are concerned about who will judge that performance.

I sincerely hope that both sides can work through the impasse and come to an agreement soon. Edison's pact with the School Board is predicated on negotiating a deal with the IFT. In other words, if teachers and Edison cannot agree, Edison will walk. If Edison walks it is very possible Governor Engler will declare Inkster Schools insolvent and toss the district into receivership. If that happens local control will be a thing of the past and Inkster Schools will likely be carved up by Wayne-Westland and other districts.

Mike's musings

Mike Wilcox

LisaKay Wojcik is a survivor. A victim of domestic violence, the Romulus resident has made it her mission to work exclusively raising money for domestic violence shelters. Her current effort is a 30-mile walkathon starting in Plymouth, wandering through most of Westland, and ending in Livonia. The event will be held on May 6, and Wojcik hopes to raise thousands of dollars for the First Step Shelter, a source of refuge for her in the past.

Wojcik's story would make a compelling TV movie. At 340 pounds, with essentially no self-esteem, the housewife was in and out of emergency rooms twenty-seven times for the nine years of her stormy first marriage. Those emergency room visits were all related to the regular beatings she received from her husband. Finally she realized she had to take control of her life and shed her husband and 210 pounds.

Now the svelte Wojcik is happily married and doing all she can to help abused women. If you'd like to help with her crusade to raise money for domestic abuse shelters make a check out to First Step at 44567 Pinetree, Plymouth, Mi. 48170. I can't think of a better cause.

No relief for cities' blocked RR tracks

A federal judge has ruled that cities cannot issue tickets to railroad companies for blocking crossings in excess of the time limits in state law.

In a lawsuit by CSX Railroad against the City of Plymouth, U.S. District Court Judge Nancy Edmunds ruled that federal law preempts state law which sets limits on the amount of time railroad crossings can be blocked (5 minutes for standing trains and 7 minutes for moving trains).

Federal law only regulates the length of trains and their (maximum) speed.

Many cities, including Plymouth and Romulus, have been issuing costly tickets to the railroad company for violations of the state time limits. Plymouth alone, which has nine crossings in the city, has issued over 2,000 tickets in the past five years. Both cities have CSX switching yards near their city limits.

Medium Rare

The revenue from the tickets is little compensation for the frustration and inconvenience residents suffer when crossings are blocked, sometimes in excess of an hour. On occasion this writer has turned around and driven to the next crossing (a mile away) only to find it blocked by the same train. Emergency vehicles often have to find alternate routes because of blocked crossings.

The situation in Romulus could get worse. The CSX yard in New Boston (near Romulus) is scheduled to be enlarged as part of federal projects establishing an "International Trade Corridor" along I-94 under NAFTA.

Even if Plymouth is successful in appealing Judge Edmunds' ruling, the issuance of tickets is not going to solve the problem. Officials in both cities recognize that grade separations (underpasses or overpasses) are the ultimate solution. Congresswoman Lynn Rivers has been successful in obtaining some federal funding for a grade separation in Plymouth and is working to get federal help for the same in Romulus.

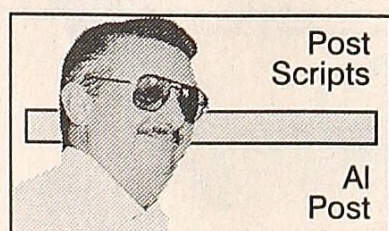

This is a classic example of two projects using federal taxpayers dollars working at cross-purposes. On the one hand subsidizing increased train traffic for the benefit of large corporations in the name of "free trade." On the other hand using more tax dollars to alleviate the problems caused (in part) by federal laws and subsidies.

Connie knows of no one cured of lyme disease, but states the disease does go into remission.

She is not afraid to counter information supplied by local, state or national medical leaders, because she feels she probably has done more research than they have.

Connie feels the number of lyme disease victims is badly undercounted statewide and nationally - because of the limited ability to diagnose the disease.

She believes that is partially due to the fact that the disease was only identified a quarter of a century ago by Dr. Allen Steere in Connecticut - while he was at Yale University.

hand, as she is a victim of the disease and carts around "large boards" depicting key information as well as photos of Wayne area residents bearing the dreaded marks of potential lyme disease rashes.

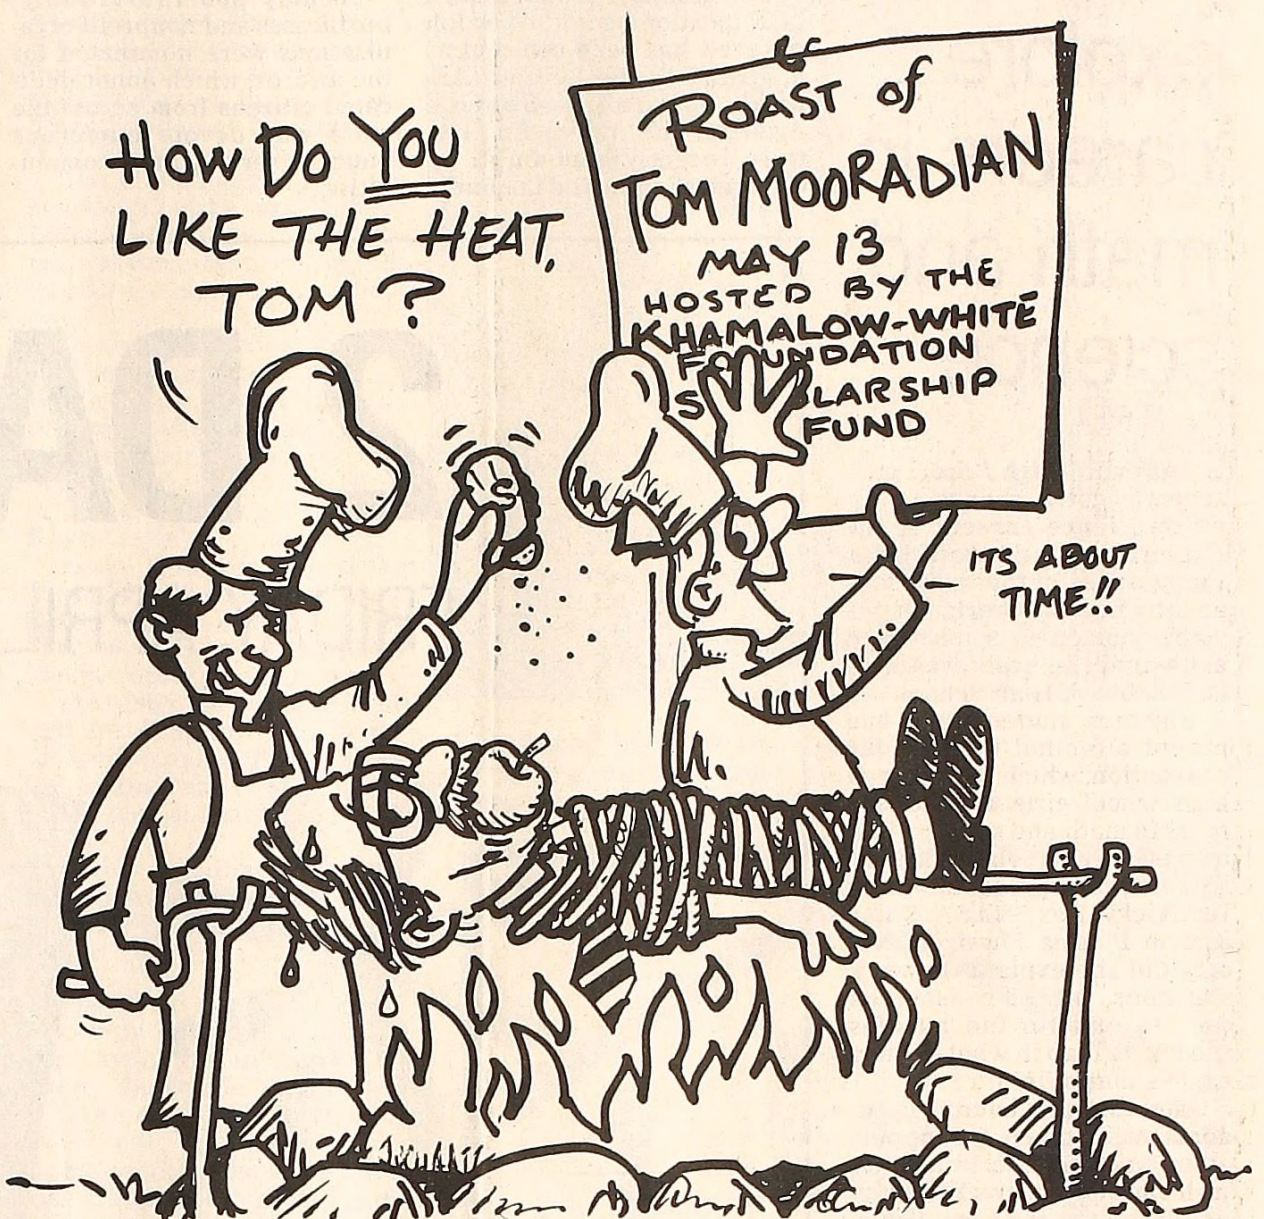

She travels miles - sometimes hundreds - to warn horse show lovers, Girl and Boy Scout troops and even persons vacationing in Michigan about the evils of lyme disease.

Connie Siese is a crusader. While no one has seen any windmills in her path...Connie is trying to convince Wayne County residents that lyme disease is a serious health problem here...and there are simple ways to help protect yourself from contracting the dreaded disease.

In her role as a para-pro with the Wayne Westland Schools, Connie holds regular seminars with students in an effort to help keep them safe each spring and summer.

While she feels lyme disease education is rather limited even in various family medical offices - she is a non-stop proponent in trying to change that fact.

Siese sees the problem first

Cell phone phobia stays in California

I always ran from California trends. But now I can't wait for latest Pacific fad, cell phone phobia, to sweep Michigan.

According to the Drudge Report, some California business owners are banning anything wireless, anything that beeps.

Why? Cell phones are too noisy. Cell phone users are too rude. Too dialed into their phones to deal face-to-face with others in public, critics say.

The trend began at Moose's, a San Francisco restaurant, when owner Ed Moose saw a customer use his cellular phone to call a buddy at the other end of the bar and decided to ban cell phones.

"I could see it coming and I wanted to stop it before it became bad," Moose reportedly said.

His whose restaurant now has little signs on the tables that show a picture of a moose talking on the phone with the words "no cellular phones please."

At Moose's, cellular phone users must go outside. (Moose reportedly insists that one romance has started this way.)

Other businesses have taken similar steps, including courtrooms, where some judges fine attorneys hundreds of dollars whenever their cell phones or beepers chime; many ocean-side art galleries and museums are banning them; and many Silicon Valley high tech firms are restricting them to parking lots with the smokers.

I agree.

Cell phones in public are often annoying. How could they be otherwise in a country with than 90 million cell phones connecting every teenager, sales person, mother-in-law and drug dealer in the country burying their faces into plastic mouthpieces.

Not only are cellular motor mouths a common sight, but so are 130-foot cellular towers, which sprout out of shopping centers like metal beanstalks.

Then there's the dangers. Everybody likes to talk and most folks enjoy driving, but when a cell phone combines those two activities, you've created something just as dangerous as a driver on LSD.

The difference is that only a few nut cases are out there driving on LSD, while, according to a survey by Prevention Magazine, 85 percent of cellular users said they use the devices while driving at least occasionally.

Then there's the microwave radiation fritzing out of cellular phones at 900-1,800 megahertz. Sure telecommunications industry scientists say its harmless, but microwave oven industry scientists also say that microwave ovens are safe, yet you wouldn't stick your head in a microwave oven. So why stick a microwave transmitting cellular phone into your ear?

Once again, LSD would probably be safer.

Yet almost everybody in Michigan loves cellular phones. I know a guy who carried around two cellular phones, a beeper, and walkie-talkies for his wife and another for his construction superintendent. When he's not using them to run his many businesses and keeping tabs on his wife, his complaining about dead reception areas or the possibility of better cellular phones.

This is a guy who used to the life of the party wherever he went.

Now his world is reduced to a phone booth.

In the old days, when people had manners, gentlemen would doff their hats. In my opinion, we should treat cell phones the same way.

Shame on people who have forgotten reason for sports

To the Editor:

I love going to the High School track meets. I get a thrill watching all the dedicated young athletes performing to the best of their ability in the spirit of friendly competition. I cheer for the winners, but I applaud every one of them. They're all winners because of their hard work, their love of the sport, and most of all, because of their commitment to teamwork and good sportsmanship. They encourage and support each other, and not just the members of their own team, but everyone. These are the qualities we want to instill in our young men and women, and High School sports should be an ideal way to help accomplish this.

I was saddened and very disappointed when I learned of the outcome to the April 6th track meet between Canton and Salem, long-time rivals, but in reality parts of the same whole. The meet was very close and the final event would determine the winner. Everyone ran their hearts, but it was Canton's turn to win this time. The team was ecstatic, but their jubilation was soon destroyed. The Salem coach (or coaches) called for a disqualification due to a technicality. After much debate, it was decided that Salem would "win" the meet after all. The technicality? Canton had broken a written, but not widely known rule, having to do with their uniforms.

Two of the four runners in the last relay chose to wear spandex shorts under their uniform, which is allowed. But unfortunately they had not chosen the same color. The rule was intended to prevent confusion in situations where many schools are competing at the same time and some of them may have similar colors. But should breaking a rule such as this warrant disqualifications? The team was further demoralized when they learned that Salem noticed this infraction at a previous meet, but chose to ignore it and save it for a more advantageous time. I ask you, is this in the spirit of fair play and good sportsmanship?

Shouldn't we expect all coaches to look out for and care about all students? If a coach notices a minor technical error, such as this, he should immediately share the information with the athletes, or their coach, in order to prevent such an absurd and needless heartbreak. And what about the two young men who happened to be "out of uniform?" Winning should not be more important than damaging their self-confidence or crushing their spirit. Is the message we want to give our children, "Win at all costs, no matter how you do it or who you hurt?"

We want our young people to feel a well-earned sense of pride of their accomplishments. We want them to realize that integrity, fairness, and honor are a person's most valuable assets. They need and deserve role models who believe in these principles and live by them. Most of our teachers and coaches do just that and I admire them greatly. But to the few who have forgotten these basic, true reasons for teaching competitive sports I say, "Shame on you."

Attorney says Belleville has "right to know"

To the Editor:

I read in a local paper last week, a front page article on Paul Davis, which was most interesting. I wanted to clear up a misconception raised by Mr. Davis. He claims that I "slandered" him, apparently by making some reference to his domestic assault arrest. To set the record and Mr. Davis straight, you can't slander somebody by telling the truth. Apparently Mr. Davis admits that he was arrested for domestic assault. More importantly, however, the context in which this point was raised was during the Preliminary Examination of Mr. Davis' charges against Corporals Arick and Arnett. I simply asked Mr. Davis, whether his domestic assault arrest was the reason he left his position as Chief of Police in Coopersville, Michigan. His response was "no, those charges were dismissed." It is difficult to see under these circumstances how I could be slandering him with his own statements.

I was most intrigued however by the Chief's commitment the citizens' of Belleville "right to know" about his arrest. I applaud and admire his openness. I am wondering, though, when it was that he decided the citizens of our community had this "right to

Local poet completes collection of poetry

By THEOLA JONES
MCN Special Writer

It is always a pleasure to report the positive accomplishments of Inkster residents. Local poet Carmen Gilkey has completed a thought-provoking, and powerful collection of poetry, and has high hopes of publishing a book this year.

Poetry lovers can look forward to a book of poetry that will cause you to think about life and all of its complexities, and also why it is important to cling to long-instilled Christian precepts and beliefs.

Gilkey's poetry will also remind readers that there is "a man upstairs."

"Too Grand", written by Gilkey, addresses the issues of loftiness and pomposity. Read it and reflect.

Gilkey's poetry was a prominent part of a recent program that featured Jean Maura, during an evening of Song, Worship and Praise at Smith Chapel A.M.E. Church.

Too Grand

When you get "too" grand for the Lord
Your education has been lost,
When you get "too" grand for the Lord
Your soul has paid the cost.
When you get "too" grand for the Lord
You're blind to misery,
When you get "too" grand for the Lord
Not His face, but yours men see,
You set yourself high above men,
When you get "too" grand for the Lord
You forget He's coming back again,
When you get "too" grand for the Lord
Your labors are all in vain,
When you get "too" grand for the Lord
Only earthly joy you gain,
When you get "too" grand for the Lord
Your life is just getting by,
When you get "too" grand for the Lord
You've gotten just a little too high.

Agency urges residents to make a difference on Mother's Day

Inkster-based Starfish Family Services is urging readers to "Make a Difference on Mother's Day" this year.

Mother's Day will be celebrated May 14 this year.

Starfish officials point out that each and every day Starfish Family Services helps hundreds of mothers - mothers who are challenged by poverty, illiteracy, domestic violence and other obstacles that hinder their ability to provide a warm, safe and enriching family environment.

The programs at Starfish Family Services help mothers create a family that builds a happy and memorable childhood.

Wayne RESA is once again sponsoring its annual photography contest for Wayne County high school students. The theme, "People, Places & Pride," provides students the opportunity to express their photographic abilities in a variety of topics.

In recognition of the Starfish Family Services' programs that assists mothers, Starfish is offering a unique opportunity for community members to honor their mother, or another important "mother figure" in their life. Readers are invited to pay tribute to that special person by making an honorary gift of $100 to Starfish Family Services.

In turn, their mother will receive a one-of-a-kind ceramic limited-edition Motawi tile made especially for Starfish Family Services "Make a Difference on Mother's Day" giving campaign.

For more information, please contact Chuck Ragains at Starfish Family Services.

Ragains may be reached by telephone at 734-727-3123.

Implants: A preferred replacement for a single lost tooth

Sometimes a person, through an accident or other injury, may lose a single tooth in the mouth without injury to any of the other teeth. The traditional method for replacing this tooth is to place a bridge in the mouth. In doing this, your dentist would reduce the two teeth on either side of the space and construct the bridge, a three-tooth appliance, which would be cemented into place restoring the lost space.

This method, while being tried and true, does have some disadvantages. For one thing, the dentist is reducing two perfectly good teeth so the bridge can be placed. A bridge required special care to keep it clean so the gums surrounding it remain healthy. If the gums recede around the bridge, the metal edges may become exposed. Finally, a bridge will often need replacement at least once in its lifetime.

With the implant, you are just replacing the one tooth without touching the adjacent teeth. It is more easily kept clean, and in many cases will not need replacement or repair. That is why many dentists are considering it the preferred method for single tooth replacement.

At Newburgh Heights Dental, we provide just about anything your mouth may need, including implants. Call today for your appointment and we'll discuss all of your options.

Performance Auto Care

Doing things the right way

When you need a car repair or maintenance the first thing you need is experienced technicians that offer quality customer service at competitive prices. Wayne Whitehouse recognized the lack of customer care and professional service. After 17 years working as a technician he opened his own shop, Performance Auto Care.

He said that since 1982 when he got into the business, "I've heard it all! Most often I heard customers tell me about being overcharged and scared into authorizing repairs that weren't necessary." So since he opened Performance Auto Care last spring he has worked hard to prove that he offers what we are looking for in a professional service facility.

One of his goals is to offer the best services beyond the customers' expectations. He stands behind his work by offering you a 12,000 mile/12 month warranty, guaranteeing the best price in town by beating anyone's written estimates. He accept major credit cards and is open for business Monday through Saturday for customer convenience. You can also get "free" maintenance and safety inspections just for stopping in.

He says working in his home town of Westland makes a difference to him. Not only is he comfortable with people who are literally his neighbors, he said he also feels more driven to serve them right. Westland residents are his old high school buddies, friends of his family, his neighbors, and people Whitehouse will run into in the grocery store or in line at the bank. "I can be proud of what I'm doing here," Whitehouse says. "I like giving back to the community where I live."

That pride in his work extends to the extensive cleaning and revamping of his shop. "I've done a lot of work to this shop to let the public know that there has been a change," Whitehouse says of his business, which is located in the former Johnnies Garage. "I take pride in my work, and my shop's appearance reflects that."

Give this independent, all-American family man a chance to change your mind about mechanics. Take advantage of Performance Auto Care's special summer maintenance specials, and used car inspections. Performance Auto Care is located at 1250 South Wayne Road, between Palmer and Avondale. Call (734) 728-5030 for more information.

Your thing: Choosing the right career

"We are continually faced with a series of great opportunities brilliantly disguised as insoluble problems." John W. Gardener

To find the ideal career, the most important this is to figure out what you love to do; and then figure out how to get paid for it. So what do you love to do? Not sure? Ask yourself a few questions:

About People: If you could trade places with anyone who would it be? Ok, anyone who has a job? What kind of people do you most respect? Who do you want to be like?

About Learning: If you could learn to do anything, what would it be? why? what part of the new skill interests you? Do you think that you would still be interested 5 years from now?

About Money: How much money do you need to be happy? To be excited? Do you need to support others now, or in the future?

So, now you may have some idea of what kind of people you would like to work with, the skills you would like to use, and the amount of money you would like to make. This is a great starting point, but it is not enough to choose a career. Figuring out how your skills and interests provide you with job potential is a challenge. But there are ways to open your eyes to these new opportunities:

Brainstorm: You are the single best source of information for this stage of the job search. Mostly, because you care most about the outcome and you know yourself best! So take some time and write down all the different jobs that are related to your areas of interest.

Career Tests: If you're at a loss, take a career or personality survey that will indicate what jobs are best suited to you. Links for Choosing a Career provide links to these tools. This may help you narrow down your choices and introduce you to new possibilities.

Counselors and Mentors: Bounce your career plan off of counselors and/or mentors, or other people who have your best interests at heart. They will help you further determine what types of work you could channel your energy into.

By asking yourself thoughtful questions about the who, what and how much of your career requirements; and brainstorming, taking career tests, and asking mentors and career counselors for advice, determining the right career for you will become much easier.

Top 20 Fastest Growing Careers

Face it. There are two main reasons for going to college. To get an education. To get a job.

It shouldn't be too surprising that most schools prefer to emphasize reason number one. After all, "Lux et Veritas" sounds a lot classier than "Jobs, Jobs, Jobs" as a school motto. But for young college students staring down four years of tuition and a lifetime of financial uncertainty, reason number two can be just as important.

Now, if you fall into this latter category, chances are you're wondering how to achieve number one without sacrificing number two. To help you in this mission, we at Snap Technologies have compiled the following information on the fastest growing occupations in America.

Let's check the numbers.

OK, so what does it all mean? Well, looking over both lists, you've probably noticed a few general similarities. Health care jobs seem to be the big winners, especially in terms of percentage growth. This is especially good news for college students, since almost all of the above listed jobs require some form of higher education. The list shows many careers that require vocational training which is offered by many specialized colleges -- health, medical and legal training are particular areas to consider.

On the other hand, positions not normally linked to a typical four-year college education (cashiers, janitors, guards, etc.) are well represented on list number one, which shows occupations with the largest number of new jobs. In other words, the jobs you want will be out there, but the job openings you'll really see will be the same ones you could've seen if you never went to college in the first place.

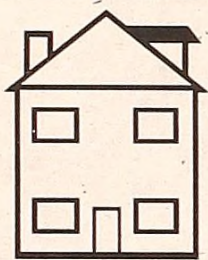

What these lists really reflect are the ongoing trends influencing the American economy. Even if none of the jobs listed above interests you, knowledge of these trends can help you plan a better job search before, during and after school. Some of these trends are:

Computers

Yes, the very same technology that makes it possible for you to plan your college career on-line is the same technology that might provide you with a job after graduation.

Computers in general, and the Internet in particular, have literally changed the way Americans work. They have also changed the way Americans look for work, something you should take advantage of the moment you set foot on campus. You college career affords you the opportunity to gain concrete computer and computer software skills which will give you a real advantage when you enter the work world.

American colleges and universities are the envy of the world when it comes to offering low cost computer access. At larger schools, most freshmen receive an Internet e-mail account. Don't let this access go to waste. You should familiarize yourself with the Internet and electronic communications. If possible you should also know how to turn your papers, labs, etc. on-line, since many companies are also relying on the Internet for their own internal communications. You should enroll in at least one computer programming class even if it isn't required. Computer literacy will be a necessary component for successful advancement. You should also become an expert user in as many software programs as possible. This will supply you with the basic skills necessary for getting your first job. These skills will also enable you to efficiently accomplish assignments.

Population Growth

Not only is the U.S. population getting larger, it is also getting older. Baby Boomers – Americans born between the years 1945 and 1965 – will move into retirement age beginning in the year 2010. What does that mean to younger Americans like you? Well, aside from changing the amount Social Security takes out of your paycheck, it means a wide range of new occupations and career opportunities. The first place to look for an impact from this graying of the American population is in the health care industry. According to the U.S. Department of Labor, health care-related jobs will increase twice as fast as the U.S. economy as a whole. Institutional-based health occupations (e.g. hospital physicians and nurses), though currently experiencing shrinkage, are poised to explode following the turn of the century. Occupations such as chiropractors, physical therapists, acupuncturists and massage therapists should show even more impressive growth.

Population growth also means more jobs in America's already burgeoning service sector. More people means more money, and as baby boomers begin cashing in those IRA's and mutual funds, look for America's most indulgent generation to unleash a tidal wave of personal spending on the American economy.

Population growth also means more jobs in America's already burgeoning service sector.

Education

Look at the top of the first list, and you will be hard pressed to find a job requiring much in terms of higher education. Don't be fooled. The number of new jobs open to Americans with four-year bachelors degrees will rise twice as fast as the number of jobs requiring short term experience and training. The same goes for jobs requiring advanced degrees, with master degrees leading the way (30 percent job growth over the next decade).

Furthermore, many occupations that require a college education come in at the top of our second list of fastest growing occupations. Systems Analysts, computer engineers, physical therapists and human services workers, all show signs of exceptionally strong growth.

The reasons behind this job growth are similar to the ones listed above. Increased technology use will require increased technical knowledge. Conversely, rising college enrollment (thanks to a rising population) has resulted in "degree inflation." Jobs that nearly a decade ago required no more than a high school education now require at least a B.A., increasing the need for a college education.

The bottom line: you will need to continue your education long after you earn your college degree in order to remain competitive in the future job market.

Politics

A new government in Hong Kong, resurgent communism in Russia, get tough on crime attitudes here at home. Think these don't effect you? Think again. In an increasingly global economy, look for political trends overseas to continue influencing career trends back here in America.

The most obvious sectors to look for this are the careers involving business and finance. Still, American magnet industries such as health care and higher education should also prosper as free trade provides for an influx of overseas dollars.

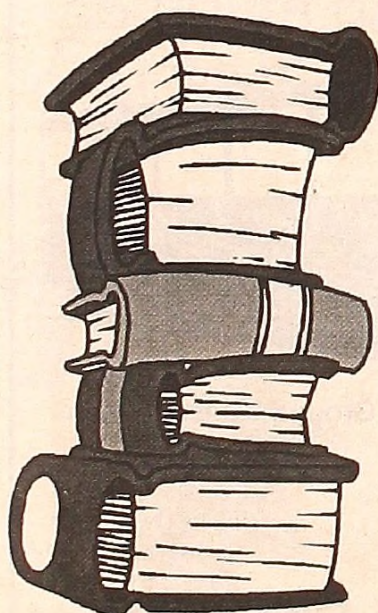

And finally, don't forget the dark side to all of this. An increasingly uncertain world means a continued demand for a strong U.S. military, good news if you're thinking about a career in the armed forces.

And, take a look at the bottom of list number two. There, you'll see two occupations that form part of America's hidden growth industry. Corrections officers and guards should both experience strong job growth, especially if current American attitudes toward crime and punishment continue into the next century.

Temping your way to a career

Deciding what to do with your life after graduation can be downright frightening. These days, however, it needn't be. Today's economy provides the opportunity for almost everyone to try before they buy - buy into a career, that is.

Many companies today deliberately maintain their full-time employee staff at as low a level as possible and rely heavily on temps to carry a major part of the required day-to-day workload. Temporary agencies have expanded from the clerical support office to include industrial, financial, technical, design, medical, dental and most other career fields. You can sign up with as many agencies as you want, try as many jobs as you are capable of handling, and be kept as busy as you want to be. The largest employer in the United States happens to be a temporary agency.

The advantages are many:

1. You will learn how to interview. If you do it often enough, you'll become comfortable with the process and will figure out what works for you and - more importantly - what doesn't.
2. You will earn while you learn. The starting salaries are not lavish to say the least but, if you live modestly, you can get by. It's not likely that you'll be able to pay off your car or your college loan during your early temp days, but you're not facing a 5+ year commitment with an unknown employer. You're not facing ANY commitment beyond what you agree to when you accept an assignment - whether it's three days, three weeks or three months.

3. You will have the flexibility to schedule your own hours to allow you to take the time needed to tend to your personal affairs without having the weight of a department or a company on your shoulders. Just make sure the company you are temping with knows you might have such a need.

4. You will accept responsibility and gain confidence in your abilities and capabilities at your own pace.

5. You will quickly find those tasks and/or career fields that you are neither interested in nor suited for. Agencies have training available and tests to determine your skills (or lack thereof!) and will not knowingly place you in an environment where you are not going to be happy and productive. If they do, you have the option to move on to another agency and other companies.

6. Temp-to-perm is always possible.

The staff at Express Personnel offer job seekers the opportunity to "try on" new careers.

If the client company likes you and you think you've found your niche, they can always arrange to buy your contract from the agency that sent you there.

7. If you mess up, you can move on to something else without a dismal record following you throughout your organization. :)

The disadvantages - not so many:

1. You are an employee of the agency, not the client company. In some companies, it doesn't matter; in others, you are set apart somewhat from their employees; and in a few, you are simply an outsider.

2. There is very little advancement in a temp job. You're hired for a specific length of time or a special project - and that's generally where you'll stay. There are "ongoing" assignments, but these also tend to keep you in a holding pattern.

3. An assignment may end abruptly. Management changes, contracts are canceled, sales are down, or any number of reasons.

4. The benefits for temps are not usually as good as those given to permanent employees.

So, congratulate yourself if you've just finished school; take a day or two off to recharge your batteries, and then don't think too much about it. Just go and sign up with an agency in your neighborhood or one in any area where you'd like to work.

An important thing to remember is that permanent jobs are not always that permanent. If you should suddenly find yourself unemployed, your world will not come crashing down around you. You will be able to pick yourself up, put your ego away, go back to your agency, and find something new and someplace new. Hopefully, it will be something better.

The Secret of Reinvention

How to Make a Career Change

by Pat Boer

Most people do not welcome career change. Even those wanting to reinvent themselves find it costly and stressful, like Minnesota's new governor, Jesse Ventura. He's gone from wrestling in tights and a feather boa to stumping across the state in jeans and a leather jacket discussing policy with legislators in suits and ties. Jesse "The Body" touted himself as Jesse "The Mind" during his gubernatorial run. Now, unexpectedly, he finds himself in the role of Jesse "The Guv".

Famous Career Changers

Jesse wasn't the only public figure to undergo a career change last year. A January skiing accident took the life of Sonny Bono, prompting his widow to take over his congressional seat. House Speaker Newt Gingrich unexpectedly resigned from his position and will not be teaching college.

These political examples show us how career shifts vary. They can be prompted by graduation, divorce, the death of a spouse, the birth of a child, the relocation of a company, the closing of a plant, or any number of events, planned and unplanned.

Examples in my own community include a third grade teacher who is now a TV anchor, an attorney-turned-professional-clown, a basketball star who's become a youth leader, a retail sales clerk in law school, a medical doctor-turned-architect, and a military pilot teaching high-school math.

The Process of Career Shifts:

How's it done? There are numerous books written on the subject, yet nearly everyone seems to follow a similar path. There's no magic. Each career change appears to begin with...

DISRUPTING EVENTS: Downsizing, relocation, graduation, company buyouts, confusion, lack of direction, divorce, death of a loved one - career change starts with the events that disrupt your routine. Sonny's widow, a housewife, never expected to run for Congress, nor did Newt anticipate he'd resign after the November elections.

DEALING WITH FEELINGS: Along with disruptions come powerful feelings: hurt, resentment, disappointment, anger, fear, and self-doubt. Dealing with feelings means learning from them how to find new direction, meaning, or purpose. For example, deep hurt teaches us what is truly important or what has been taken for granted. Resentment and anger often indicate things left unsaid or opportunities missed. Fear and self-doubt show vulnerabilities. Once you identify feelings, even the negative ones, transformation can take place.

BECOMING FOCUSED: Getting focused happens after we deal with feelings -- when we say, "Enough is enough!" That's when we set goals and concentrate on what we need to do to reach them.

MAKING A COMMITMENT: If focus pushes you forward, commitment carries you to the prize. It's the key to reaching your goal. It means putting one foot in front of the other, everyday. Commitment is the courage to keep going when others might quit. Commitment makes the difference between an unsuccessful and a successful career change.

HAVING A PLAN: A written plan will give you both direction and motivation, particularly if it includes a back-up plan. To write your plan, state your objective with timetables. Set goals and plan specific actions to help you achieve them.

Finally, not everyone is like Minnesota's Governor Jesse. Sometimes the things that make you restless are part of professional life. Perhaps they simply signal a desire for new challenges rather than a new career. Consider joining a professional association. Whether you are starting out or starting over, membership in an association allows you to connect with like-

Conducting a Job Search and Job Hunting Techniques

Finding your first job can be both a rewarding and frustrating experience.

Many jobs require experience – but how do you get experience when you are still looking for your first job? You may already have some work experience through volunteer work. Assess your skills and interests to determine what kind of skills you've had. Even unpaid work experience is beneficial in your job search.

Also, consider internships and part-time work. Not only is it a great way to get experience which you can put on your resume or on a job application, it is also a great way to try out a career to see if it is really what you want to do.

Here's some tips you may want to follow in your job search:

- Involve friends and family. A support group, such as friends and family, will offer encouragement and assistance in your job search.

• Allow a reasonable amount of time. Don't expect to find a job within a few days or weeks.

• Devote time to your job search. A thorough job search is hard work. Expect to spend several hours a day looking for a job.

• Be organized. Keep a record of all the places you have applied, who you talked to, and what response you received.

• Meet with people in the field you are interested in pursuing.

• Check job listings in the newspaper classified advertising sections or with your state employment office.

Your state employment office also may be able to offer some job search assistance.

Staying motivated while you look for a job

Motivation Advice

It is often difficult to stay positive during the job search. Potential employers can be unresponsive or even rude; and friends and family often express how unimpressed they are with the state of your world.

So what to do, when you have the job search blues?

1) The first thing is to remember is that millions of people are looking for a job everyday - it is a normal activity successful people engage in. How else could you get a good job? Aunt Hilda may not understand - but it's still a fact of life.

2) Be ready with responses. Know what your going to say if someone asks an awkward question like where you're working, or what you're doing. That way you avoid blurting out a response that makes you feel embarrassed.

3) Look for a job you want. This is really important. There is nothing more uninspiring than having to take a lot of crap, to get something you don't really want. Focus on the job you'd like to do, and the job search will be a bit more palatable.

It is often hard to stay positive during the job search. But if you remember that there are millions of others in the same boat; have responses ready for those prying questions; and concentrate on looking for a job you really want; staying positive can become a lot easier.

Cover letter tips

Remember: A cover letter should include items about your past experiences which are not necessarily covered within the resume.

Tips.

- Address the cover letter to a specific person with an exact title.
- Produce the letter on 20 lb. cotton bond, white or off-white paper.
- Keep your letter short and to the point.
- Describe how your skills and abilities will benefit the company.
- Provoke the employer to read your resume.
- Request a job interview.
- Include the current date on the upper portion of the page.
- Don't include reference names or addresses. These belong on a separate piece of paper.
- Don't include personal beliefs, traits or features. It's unprofessional, and besides, a the employer is prohibited by law from asking many personal questions, such as those regarding your marital status, whether you have children, you religion, and health background.

• Don't include your age. For the same reason as above.

• Don't talk negatively about previous employers. It will appear as if you have a hard time "playing well with others."

Tactics.

- First paragraph:
State the position in which you are interested and any persons who recommended this position for you. Include your name, address and phone in plain view.
- Second and third paragraphs:
Include past experience related to the position for which you are applying. Convey enthusiasm for the position or profession. Highlight specific job qualifications which are not necessarily listed on your resume.
- Fourth paragraph:
Restate your interest for the position and a few key abilities. Request an interview. Thank the employer for his or her time and effort.
- Closing:
Two of the most common closings are "Best Regards," and "Sincerely."

Interview tips & tactics

Tips:

- Be sincere and direct. In a word, be yourself. You'll feel more comfortable and ensure a good employer/employee match if you are not trying to be something you're not.
- Be attentive and polite. Put your very best foot forward. Offer a warm hand shake and a smile. Remember the interviewer's name, and address him or her as "Mr." or "Ms." unless invited to use first names.
- Ask relevant questions. Usually, the interviewer will invite you to ask questions toward the end of the interview. You should let the interviewer guide the meeting, and you can jump in after he or she has given you enough information to do so. Do not, however, ask about salary during the first meeting.
- Answer questions concisely. It's okay to pause before answering, rather than talk in circles. Try to imagine what types of questions may be asked of you before you go to the interview, so you may have ready answers available.
- Use specific examples to illustrate points. When asked to demonstrate your effectiveness at previous jobs, don't simply say, for example, "I increased sales at XYZ company," or "I had a lot of responsibility." Instead give more concrete answers, such as, "I landed 13 new accounts at XYZ company, and increased sales with my existing accounts by 14 per cent in the last year." Or be specific about increases in responsibility, promotions, and your duties.
- Keep eye contact. But don't stare.
- Take extra copies of your resume and references. You may be interviewed by a panel, in which case you'll need enough resumes to pass around.
- Take samples of your previous work, if applicable.
- Don't try to control the interview. Let the interviewer lead. Remember, even in this buyer's market economy, you are still trying to sell yourself.
- Don't be too serious. But don't be too relaxed, either. Just be professional, warm, and confident.
- Don't make negative comments. Especially about your previous employer.

It makes you look bad. Behave and speak as if the world is your oyster. And no matter how bad your last employer was, you certainly learned some good lessons. Focus on those, and BE POSITIVE.

- Don't look at your wristwatch. It's rude. You want the employer to know that he or she is your priority. Avoid feeling like you're in a hurry by keeping your calendar clear the day of your interview—leave large blocks of time for the interviews.
- Don't take extensive notes. It's distracting, and makes you appear inexperienced or over-eager.
- Don't be late. Again, this is rude, and sends the message that your prospective employer's time is of no value to you.

Tactics.

- Research the company or organization before the interview. Look them up on the internet. When you are called for the interview, ask if the company has any newsletters, a printed job description, or any marketing brochures that you could review before your interview. Ask if it would be best if the company mails them, or if you could pick them up.
- Link your abilities and skills to as many questions as possible.
- Arrive at least 10-15 minutes early.
- Ask at least two questions at the end of the interview. Some general questions that may be appropriate would be: What would be some of my major challenges in this position? When is this position available? Do you have a specific job description for this position? Are you looking for traditional or innovative solutions to problems?
- Immediately following the interview, note the subjects that were discussed, and write a thank you note to the interviewer.
- Call the employer about the position after one week has elapsed.
- Maintain a daily schedule, especially if you have more than one interview to attend.

Chronowski Fired

Legendary Wayne Memorial baseball coach dismissed for using an expletive

By TOM MOORADIAN
MCN Staff Writer

A Wayne Memorial High School baseball coaching legend was fired last week reportedly for using an expletive during a pep-talk with team members.

Jim Chronowski, who began his coaching career in the Wayne-Westland Community School District as an assistant coach in 1965 and was promoted to head baseball coach at Wayne Memorial when then coach Gary Green stepped down in 1968, confirmed Monday night that that he was fired.

"They fired me apparently because I used that big Anglo-Saxon 'F' word," said Chronowski, during a telephone interview. "More than 30 years of coaching goes down the drain because of it."

Chronowski, a political science and American History teacher when he's not coaching baseball, summarized the administration's actions as "a witch hunt."

Chronowski said that he did not want to comment further "because I want to look at my options."

Chronowski has retired as an educator from the school district, but his coaching contract had been extended annually for the past three years.

On Tuesday, Dr. Greg Baracy, superintendent of Wayne-

Westland schools, said that coach Chronowski was dismissed for a litany of abuses.

"I don't think a coach, any coach, has the right to verbally abuse children," Dr. Baracy said. "These are not the kind we want as role models for our children."

William Hawley, longtime athletic director at Wayne Memorial, called the incident "very unfortunate."

"But, yes, we have replaced coach Chronowski with an interim coach who will finish out the season. And, I can understand the bitterness that accompanies this action."

"After all, you don't take a popular coach who has won more than 400 games, has produced some of the finest ball players in the state and the country and fire him without some sort of counter-reaction."

"But, you also can't allow a coach to use verbal language that is unsuitable anywhere."

Hawley said the varsity team has been assigned to Tom Wakefield, "who is a loyal Zebras, and has the credentials to get the job done." The Wayne AD added that Wakefield had been coaching at Madonna College, but the head of the Madonna Athletic Department has agreed to allow Wakefield out of his contract to coach at Wayne Memorial.

Wakefield has reportedly inherited an atypical Wayne Memorial team that has a 1-3 record.

During Chronowski's tenure as head coach, Wayne Memorial won conference, district and regional championships and reached the "Final 4" in 1976 with such notable players as Pat Sheridan, who later went on to star at EMU before playing professionally with Kansas City and the Detroit Tigers.

Chronowski, a member of the Michigan High School Baseball Coaches Hall of Fame, has been the Coach of the Year a handful of times.

A strict disciplinarian, who over the years has coached more than 1,000 varsity ball players, many of whom went on to play collegiate ball, Chronowski said that it was not the way he envisioned leaving the profession.

"Some people have asked me over the year why I didn't go on to coach on the college level," Chronowski said. "And my response has been that I have always been content with coaching high school kids."

"Yes, I admit, I am a taskmaster - and like the Bobby Knights of the world - I may have demanded too much at times. But I have always had the players' best interest at heart."

"Some of them have come back and told me that the discipline has helped them in life."

"After all, isn't that what it's all about?"

Beasley's trek lifts
Eagles to 2nd win

Behind senior Caleb Beasley's triple-winning performance, defending Mega Conference, Blue Division champ, Romulus, buried Gibraltar Carlson, 89-33, in a track and field dual meet staged under a cold and bleak sky.

"It was cold out there," said Romulus coach Norb Glover, "and our times and performances reflected it. Let's hope that as the weather improves, so will our times."

But the inclement weather didn't stop Beasley, who has moved to the head of his class in the distance events. Beasley captured a first place in the mile as he led the pack to the wire in 5:03. He also stashed the 2-mile event into the Eagles' winning column, claiming the event with a slow 11:01.

Beasley teamed with Ashley Terry, Hemberto Comatho and Isaiah Tillman for the victory in the two-mile relay.

The Eagles dominated the field events. They swept the long jump competition with David Jones, who won the event with a leap of 20'4". Ray Graves and Joe Watson finished second and third. Glover also has an athlete who has cleared 19 feet in Chris Talley.

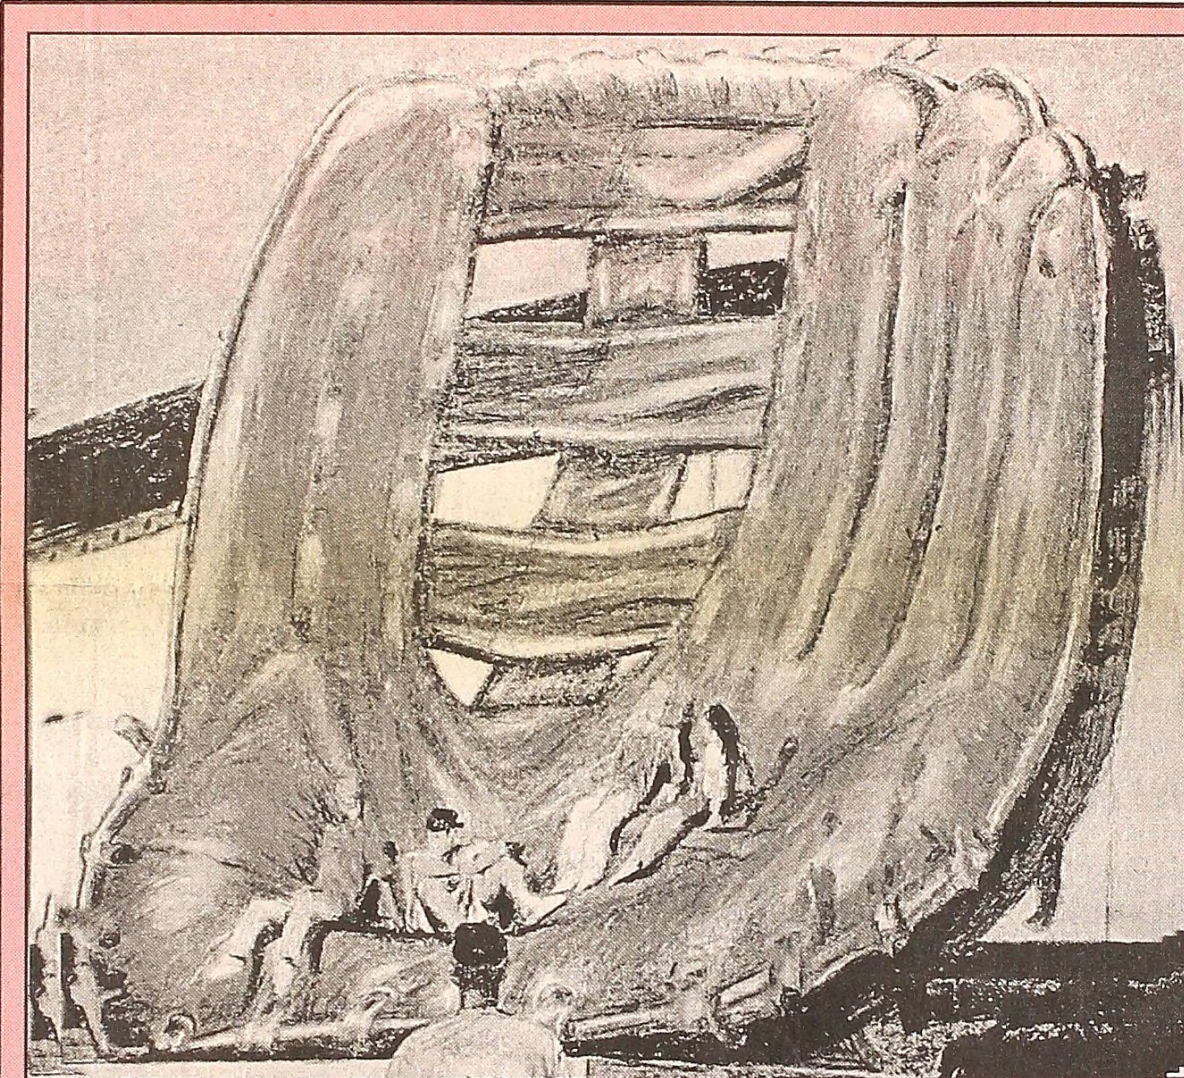

Kevin Thomas, of hoop fame, won the high jump event, and Myron Mosley placed first in the shot put competition. David Moomaw apparently is keeping in shape for the upcoming football season by tossing the discus. Moomaw airlifted the discus 100'20" for another Romulus victory.

In the 100-meter dash, Charles Searcy not only won the event, but did it in the state-qualifying time of 11.3. Beasley beat out the field in the 800 meters and Joe Watson won the high hurdles.

Competing in the prestigious Elks Relays in Dearborn over the weekend, Glover's Eagles returned with a pair of gold medals. They won the 2-mile relay with Ashley Terry, Jarvis Jordan, Tillman and Beasley. The winning time was posted as 3:20.1.

Terry, Jordan, Tillman and Beasley broke the Elks' record for the 4 by 400 relay when they toured the distance in 3:24.

Romulus placed second in the 400-meter relay (44.2) with Searcy, Fred Harbor, Juan McCledon and Ray Graves, and Watson, Searcy, Harbor and Graves placed second to Elks' overall invitational winner, Adrian, in the 800-meter relay when they crossed the finish line in 1:34.0. Adrian's four-some carded a 1:30.

From the creative mind of former Westland John Glenn athlete-artist Donald Wakefield has come "The Glove", one of baseballs most unique monuments. Wakefield, who has several artistic pieces scattered across the state of California, has approached the Detroit Tigers to finance the project at Comerica Park. The Westland native says that the Tigers responded immediately, but have not come up with the financing.

Glenn sports artist creates 'The Glove'

A former Westland John Glenn athlete-turned artist has designed one of the most exciting monuments of major league baseball.

Donald Wakefield, a 1974 graduate of John Glenn, and no relation to the immortal Detroit Tigers' Hall of Famer Dick Wakefield, has created "The Glove".

The majestic monument will stand over 16 feet tall, and offer the most comfortable and unique VIP seats in baseball. Titled "The Glove", the functional sculpture will incorporate luxurious seating for eight within its realistic looking structure.

"It will be a fun and fantastic photo opportunity for fans of all ages, and can also serve as a wonderful tribute to past, current and future players," Wakefield noted.

Two of the stimulating options for "The Glove" monument include a hydraulic lift to elevate the monument up from the stands following the National Anthem, and a 60" diameter, hand-carved granite baseball with contributors names etched into the surface.

"The Glove" can be created in solid stone, metal, or fiberglass to offer potential teams the landmark in a variety of materials, styles, colors and prices.

"A unique feature of the monument is that it can eventually pay for itself from the sale of VIP seats and marketing options related to the monument," said Kim Kern, the studio project manager, "especially if its installed inside the stadium."

Wakefield Studios, the artist's Chino-based company, developed a sports monument series to help professional sports stadiums stand out from the others.

The monument was proposed to the Detroit Tigers, the team Wakefield grew up with as a child. The Tigers responded immediately, but to date have not arranged financing.

The Westland artist has designed and been awarded commissions for large-scale sculptures in Chicago, Minneapolis, LaJolla, Santa Monica, San Bernardino, Rancho Cucamonga and Rancho Mirage.

Wakefield moved to California to pursue an artistic career and to study art and culture at UCLA in 1978 and the Laguna Beach College of Art upon graduating from John Glenn.

Belleville, Glenn
split twin billBy TOM MOORADIAN
MCN Staff Writer

It wasn't the kind of a baseball week any of Westland John Glenn players or coaching staff would write home about.

Or like to remember. After all they did drop four of their five scheduled games last week.

However, the Rockets did manage to come alive in the nightcap of a twin bill against Belleville on Saturday.

After digesting three consecutive beatings from Western Lakes Conference opponents, the Rockets split a doubleheader with out-of-conference foe, Belleville.

"We just aren't play the kind of ball I feel that we're capable of," said Glenn coach Todd Duffield. "The potential is there, but it doesn't help if it doesn't materialize."

On Saturday, Belleville's R. C. Linzell worked five innings, gave up a harmless single to Josh Day in the second inning, and went on to win a 9-4 opener. The Tiger hurler fanned three, but walked five, and hit one batter during his five innings on the mound.

Duffield started sophomore Brandon Ajlouny who was tagged for four runs in the opening inning. He gave up three hits and a walk in his brief appearance on the mound before Brian Toth took over and finished up.

Belleville's Gabe Keelan had an excellent game against the two Rocket hurlers. He laced a pair of singles and scored twice in the opener.

John Glenn came back with Nate Campbell on the mound who managed to stop the Rockets' losing streak at four. Staked to a 6-0 lead after the first 2 1/2 innings, Campbell hung on to post a 11-8 victory over the Tigers for his first win of the campaign.

He gave up six runs, three hits while striking out five and allowing five to reach bases on balls.

Reliever Jeff Mitchell, who came into the game in the sixth, got the save.

Belleville started Charlie Borgue, who pitched two-plus innings before he left for reliever Kiuan Hearn. Hearn also wasn't around until the end as Belleville coach Pat Dignan opted to get a look at Steve Edwards.

Glenn scored two in the second, came back with four runs in the third, added three runs in the fourth before putting single runs on the scoreboard in the fifth and seventh inning.

Belleville responded with five runs in the bottom of the third and that closed the gap to 6-5 after three full innings. But when the Rockets came up with three in their fourth, it all but sealed the victory.

*Harrison's Dennis
Kay got the victory.*

Ajlouny led the assault against Tiger pitching as he drilled three hits, including a double. He also scored two runs. Teammate Chad Sansom came through, with a pair of singles and Josh Day chipped in with a single and a double and two RBIs.

The Westlanders were shut-out by Farmington's Ian Paradonnet, who fired a two-hitter in a 6-0 triumph over their conference rivals. Paradonnet notched 10 strikeouts and walked two in a game he controlled from start to finish.

Samson and Jeff Mitchell spoiled the Farmington's pitcher's bid for a no-hitter when Samson stroked a single in the opening inning and Mitchell came back with a base hit in the seventh.

Mitchell also was charged with the loss. He gave up three runs, struck out three and walked one in three innings of work. Dave Mijal replaced Mitchell in the fourth and Farmington also tagged the reliever for three runs and four hits.

Farmington Hills Harrison scored three runs in the third and an equal number in the sixth in a 9-3 victory over the Rockets. Mijal started but left the duel after two, giving up one run and one hit. Glenn reliever Brian Toth who worked two innings and gave up four runs was charged with the loss.

Harrison's Dennis Kay got the victory.

The Westlanders scored two of their three runs in the third with two outs. Samson singled and scored when Brandon Ajlouny tripled. Mitchell's single drove in Brandon.

In the seventh, Tim Howard walked, went to second on an infield error and advanced to third on a sacrifice. Samson's fielder's choice produced Glenn's seventh-inning run.

Stevenson's Lanny Wilson survived seven Glenn hits to chalk up an 8-3 victory over the Rockets.

Mitchell was tagged for six hits, but walked five and struck out three in the loss. Samson doubled for one of his three hits. He also drove in one of the three Rocket runs. Mijal also collected three hits, one of those was a triple.

Coach Duffield and the Rockets were busy earlier in the week. They were scheduled to play at North Farmington (Monday) and at Edsel Ford on Tuesday before traveling to Livonia Franklin yesterday.

They have the rest of the week to practice and to find a way to iron out their kinks.

Lady Zebras fall to Franklin golfers

Despite an outstanding individual performance from Amber Henn, Wayne Memorial dropped a six-stroke decision to out-of-conference golf opponent, Livonia Franklin, last week.

Henn toured the 9-holes at Fox Creek Golf Course in Livonia with a 54, the best of the Zebra golfers.

But Wayne fell to the Patriots, 225-231. Wayne was also no match for the Pioneers of Dearborn who turned back the Zebras 235-257. Henn again paced the Zebras. She carded a 60 for her team's medalist honors.

Ex-Wayne High hoop star to play for Western Illinois

A former Wayne Memorial basketball star who went on to star at Schoolcraft College will continue his collegiate career at Western Illinois this fall.

Western Illinois head basketball coach Jim Kerwin announced this week that he has signed Brian Williams, who prepped at Wayne Memorial where he earned all-Mega Red Conference and All-Area honors.

Coach Kerwin also has signed Quentin Mitchell.

The new Leathernecks, both from Schoolcraft College, in Livonia, are expected to play a big role in the future success of Western Illinois' basketball program.

Williams, a 6-2 point guard from Wayne, was an honorable mention all-MC-CAA after leading the league with 97 assists (6.1 per game). He was the recipient of team awards for academics, attitude and athletics and averaged 7.2 per game.

Williams shot 49.6 percent from the field (37.5 percent from three-point range) and was a 71.1 shooter from the free throw line.

"Both of these players will add to the Western Illinois basketball program, athletically and academically," said Schoolcraft head coach Carlos Briggs. "They are both great students and basketball players. Both are very coachable players who should contribute to WIU's success."

"Quentin (Mitchell) is a great perimeter shooter who brings size and experience to the table," Briggs added. "He is an excellent defender who possesses great athleticism."

"Brian (Williams) has great court awareness and will greatly help WIU at the point guard spot. He did an excellent job of running our offense from the point guard position and is a great leader who has outstanding mental toughness and is an excellent defender."

Mitchell and Williams, both of whom will be juniors next year, were instrumental in leading Schoolcraft College to an impressive 24-7 overall record this season, and the school's first outright Michigan Community College Athletic Association title. The Ocelots were 15-1 in the league.

Mitchell, a 6-4 guard, was named Second Team All-MCCAA and was an all-region selection. He is the recipient of the team's Most Improved Player Award this season, averaging 15.5 points per game.

In the 1999-2000 season, the Ocelots were the state runners-up and were the only junior college team in the nation to be ranked in the top 10 in team offense and defense — finishing as the nation's second-leading scoring team at 96.9 points per game and finishing seventh in defense, allowing only 68.6 per game.

In the 1998-99 season, Schoolcraft won the state championship and the regional title, finishing with a 26-5 record.

Romulus is playing first inning blues

If Romulus can find a way to get out of the first innings without giving up a handful of runs, coach Keith Brothers' believes the Eagles may win some more games this season.

As it stands, last week, Romulus dropped three of their four games as Brothers seeks a solution to his team's dilemma. "Those first innings are killing us," Brothers said. "I can't understand it. We are playing catch up and obviously when you do that you're going to have problems."

Melvindale scored five times in the first inning and went on to hand the Eagles a 13-4 setback in the first of two crossover Mega Conference games. The Cardinals buried Romulus 10-1 in the second game to sweep the series.

In the nightcap, winning pitcher Bill Winczner helped his own cause with a three-run homer in the - you guessed it - first inning, then pitched a four-hitter against the Eagles to pick up the victory.

Winczner went three-forthree for the game and was a perfect five-for five for the series.

Brothers used senior Aaron Brohl, a right-handed senior, on the mound in the second game. Brohl allowed nine hits in his six-innings of work. He also fanned five while walking five batters.

In the opener, the Cardinals erupted for five runs in the first and also scored five in the seventh in their 14-4 shellacking of the Eagles.

Ryan Block, replaced in the second after the Cardinals pushed seven runs across the plate, was relieved by Brohl who pitched two solid innings before Melvindale tallied five runs in the bottom of the seventh to put it away.

Romulus' Robert Belcher collected two of the Eagles' five hits. He had a double and a single and also walked. Justin Goodman singled and walked and drove in one of the Eagles' four runs.

Taylor Truman handed the Eagles a 14-3 setback in another crossover that was closer than the final score indicates. Romulus scored three runs in their fourth to close within two, 5-3, of erasing the deficit, however, Truman exploded for six big runs that settled the issue.

In that Romulus fourth, Dennis Landskroener singled, stole second, advanced to third when the Truman catcher failed to handle a third strike on Charles Dandria.

The two Romulus base runners scored when Brohl drilled a triple into deep right center and scored with Block's sacrifice fly.

Romulus managed to survive a five-run Robichaud first to pick up a 12-5 Mega Conference, Gold Division victory.

Alan Brohl gave up one hit, but issued six walks that paved the way for the five Robichaud runs to card the victory.

Brohl helped his cause with a perfect two-for-two at the plate, which included three RBIs.

Hoop stars, coach honored

Local sports litigation developing into national issue

In June of 1998, when a small, informal Grand Rapids area group filed a lawsuit against the Michigan High School Athletic Association, which has prevailed in every legal action for 20 years, it may have seemed a mismatch of David and Goliath proportions.

However, what began as an action to force the MHSAA to change the time of year for some of its post-season tournament (so they coincide with college seasons), the rules for those tournaments (to be the same as the intercollegiate level), the places the tournaments are played and even the sports for which the tournaments are conducted, has become a lawsuit that could define the scope of the Federal Government's authority in the affairs of privately funded, not-for-profit, voluntary organizations...with the MHSAA playing the part of David and the United States government as Goliath.

The case is not about equity; it's about government control. More precisely, it's about a private organization's institutional integrity to conduct activities that are not clearly illegal without government intervention.

The plaintiffs advance a theory of equity—that any difference between girls and boys programs or between high school and college programs is discriminatory - with which no league or statewide association of coaches or administrations in Michigan is in agreement.

The lightning rod for this litigation is that the high schools in Michigan conduct girls basketball in the fall and girls volleyball in the winter, which is opposite intercollegiate seasons in all other states and Canadian provinces except Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, the smaller high schools of Virginia and the province of Ontario.

Obviously, the MHSAA schedules its post-season tournaments to coincide with schools' calendars. A 1999 survey of female student-athletes and five five surveys of member schools during the past 25 years demonstrate huge support for the Michigan model.

While Michigan's high school population base ranks seventh or eighth in the nation, depending on the source, Michigan ranks fourth in the number of female high-school golfers and tennis players and third in the number of female high school basketball and volleyball players.

The MHSAA argues more than the considerable facts available to support the benefits of the calendar preferred by its member schools. The MHSAA asserts that the association is not subject to Title IX of the 1972 Education Amendments.

The MHSAA bases its argument on the fact that the MHSAA receives no federal funds directly or indirectly, a position affirmed by the U.S. Government in 1984 and by a Federal District Court in Kalamazoo in this action last January.

But the Federal District Court also said it doesn't matter whether or not the MHSAA receives federal funds directly or indirectly. The court held that schools which do receive federal funds have ceded control of interscholastic athletics to MHSAA (notwithstanding that Michigan law prohibits schools from doing so) and that such delegation of authority to the MHSAA subjects the MHSAA to Title IX.

The MHSAA has appealed the District Court's decision to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, and the U. S. Government of Justice is intervening for the plaintiffs to try to preserve this expansive reading of Title IX.

The MHSAA didn't choose and doesn't have the authority - practically or legally - to dictate what sports local schools will sponsor and when they will conduct those sports. The MHSAA has argued that the plaintiffs had the wrong target for their lawsuit.

But now that the federal government has intervened in the case, it's clear that the intent is to bring even privately funded organizations under the federal government's control.

"Keeping" is faithful to comedy

By SYBLE Marr
MCN Staff Writer

WARNING: The following movie may not be suitable for the timid. You may find offense from the religious comedy in this movie. So fair warning this is a comedy about religion. Thank you.

Everyone has had a best friend that have been in their life through thick and thin. Somebody who has been there for you. Your a little different then the rest of the guys, they are a little different from the rest of the guys. Hey you work well together though, right?

In the recent release Keeping the Faith that is the relationship that held Brian Finn and Jake Schram, Edward Norton and Ben Stiller, together for their most of their lives.

Brian and Jake grew up in New York's Upper West Side. Both knew they were different from the other kids. They both were beat up on the playground from bullies, they both found religion as an escape, and they both were best friends with the same blonde girl that showed them both that life is fun and to just be yourself.

Anna, Jenna Elfman, was the tomboy that every guy loves. She was a guy one minute and a girl the next, but you still could tell that she would rather be climbing trees. Then she left, moved away with her family, and lost touch.

Brokenhearted for their friend Anna, Brian and Jake continue to stay best buddies. They teach one another about their religious beliefs, one Catholic and one Jewish. They learn and experience what goes on in the two different worlds. They grow up to become what each have always known they would become someday, clergymen.

They both have their ups and downs in the field they have chosen. Mostly downs, but they get through it. With hopes in the back of their minds of bringing both religions together for recreation and social events. Of course some of their flocks are not in the line to sign up, but they work hard to try to get everyone to see it their way.

Finally one day they hear from and old friend, Anna. She is a high powered executive, that still, does not take crap from the bullies on her playground. She is in New York for a couple of months, so she calls up her old buddies to hang out.

They have fun and they become three peas in a pod

again, but one change, they have grown into adults. Anna and Jake become secret lovers, the one hitch though is that Brian decides that he wants to give up the priesthood to become the man he thinks Anna wants and needs in her life.

This love triangle is a hilarious look into something many people find offensive and very taboo. Brian's healthy lust for a woman he can not have make you feel his pain, yet make you laugh at the lengths that he goes not to loose what he has worked so hard to become.

Being a Rabbi comes with a different set of rules, and the rules of celibacy does not comply. Which means Jake is more than happy to play along with the game Anna wants to play. Yet it has him a bit torn, she is not Jewish. Jake's mother disowned one child for not marrying a Jewish girl, will she see through that and accept the non-Jewish Anna while many beautiful Jewish woman want her youngest son?

This movie is a good laugh that will make you think again about your religious beliefs. Not so much as whether you should go from being catholic to being Jewish, or just the opposite. It make you think how serious many people are about their religion. How no matter all odds they will fight for the beliefs that they have, even if temptation is dangling in there face.

Keeping the Faith is exactly that keeping the faith that no matter how much you want something, you might be happier without it and staying with what you actually believe in. When you leave this movie you have a good feeling, a feeling of being normal, a feeling of belonging, and a good feeling about your values that many do not hold so dear anymore.

Lyme disease season nears in most of Michigan

By AL POST
MCN Staff Writer

Education is your best defense against lyme disease--and the best time to get educated is May 16, Connie Siese, a Wayne resident and victim of the disease, stated Tuesday.

Siese, who spends hours upon hours each year warning Michigan residents about the dreaded disease, will offer her annual Education Night at 7 p.m. May 16 at the First United Methodist Church of Wayne.

The session is free to the public.

While there are only 400 accepted lyme disease cases accepted by Michigan health specialists, Siese feels there are actually thousands.

An educational lyme disease billboard located in the area attracts 500 calls a month to the national hotline, she said.

The hotline is 1-888-784-LYME.

In addition she has spoken to more than 100 groups in the last 6-8 years, Siese said, and continues to warn people of the four simple steps to preventing the disease.

- (1) avoid tick habitats.
- (2) dress properly if you go into these tick habitats.
- (3) check for and remove all ticks from yourself and family members as soon as possible after leaving a tick habitat.

(4) check pets for ticks and use tick-control pet products.

But Siese feels two major drawbacks currently hurt the anti-lyme disease effort -- namely that curing lyme disease is a long term effort and she feels that most doctors today are now fully educated on the disease symptoms.

Thus Siese warns that many lyme disease victims are not properly diagnosed since a tick bite can cause more than one disease.

Siese also warns grandparents, parents and teenagers to be aware that rodents -- such as white footed field mice -- are prime carriers of the disease.

Letters

know?" Did he think the citizens had a "right to know" when he filled out his employment application for the Chief's position? Did he think the citizens had a "right to know" about his arrest when he was interviewed by the Civil Service Commission? Did he think that the City Council also had a "right to know" about his arrest before he accepted employment? Most importantly, why did he wait until everyone already knew before he decided we had "a right to know?"

Now this got me thinking. Is there anything else that happened in Coopersville or Sumpter that we have a "right to know" about? Does Mr. Davis think our community has a "right to know" about all of the times he went golfing while on the payroll as "Commander" in the Township of Sumpter? Or all of the times he took the afternoons off and never came back from lunch while he was on the payroll as "Commander" in the Township of Sumpter? Does he think that the community has a "right to know" about the times that he used Township of Sumpter Patrol Vehicles to pick up and deliver planting material to his home? And does Mr. Davis believe the community has a "right to know" about all of the time he took off the job while on the payroll as the Chief of Coopersville, while installed irrigation systems for his irrigation customers? Does Mr. Davis believe that we have a "right to know" about the Sumpter Officer he tried to "paper" on "time card fraud" and his lack of success?

Maybe we could see front page articles every week on Mr. Davis, as it appears as though there is probably a lot of things he would like us all to know. One thing he obviously didn't know, however, was the fact that our Department recently purchased all new semi-automatic H & K pistols. He doesn't really want us to go out and spend thousands of more dollars on Glocks does he? Isn't it true that the City Police Department under his auspices is already $65,000.00 over budget? I would like to see more of these articles about Mr. Davis and some of the things that he can tell us about so that we all can satisfy our "right to know."

Signed,
Thomas K. DiPietro
